Solving differential equations using neural networks M. M. Chiaramonte and M. Kiener 1INTRODUCTION The numerical solution of ordinary and partial differential equations (DEs) is essential to many engineering fields. Traditional methods, such as finite elements, finite volume, and finite differences, rely on discretizing the domain and weakly solving the DEs over this discretization. While these ...

Caruana reported that large networks rarely do worse than small networks on the problems he investigated. The results in this paper partially correlate with that observation.
